MESSAGE FROM JOHN B. LYNCH, JR., KENDRA L. BERARDI, AND DANA M. HORTON

On behalf of the Firm's Diversity Committee and Women's Committee, we are pleased to publish this second edition of Robinson+Cole's Spectrum, a joint diversity and inclusion quarterly newsletter. Spectrum will continue to highlight the work that the firm's lawyers and staff do to make sure Robinson+Cole is a diverse, inclusive and welcoming firm. The Robinson+Cole community continues to work to strengthen the firm through our diversity and inclusion efforts.

During the past quarter, the former chair of our Women's Committee, Nuala E. Droney, received an appointment to serve as a Connecticut Superior Court Judge. This appointment is a great honor for both Nuala and the firm, and a very positive development for the State of Connecticut. As you likely know, Dana and Kendra have stepped up to serve as co-chairs of the Women's Committee. We want to thank Dana and Kendra and all of our fellow committee members for their efforts in carrying out their individual roles and increasing awareness, both internally and externally, of the diversity issues we face as a firm, as well as within the legal community at large.

As always, if you have any thoughts or ideas on how our Women's Committee and Diversity Committee can better serve the needs of the firm, please do not hesitate to contact us or another member of the committee.

ATTORNEY SPOTLIGHT

In this edition of Spectrum, we are pleased to introduce a new feature, the Attorney Spotlight, which will highlight members of the firm who are actively engaged in furthering our efforts to strengthen and promote diversity and inclusion.

Jeannine C. Jacobson, a resident in our Miami office, joined the firm in August 2017, along with eleven other attorneys formerly with Sedgwick LLP. She focuses her practice on litigation related to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA); managed care; insurance coverage; and life, health, disability, and accidental death and dismemberment (AD&D) benefits. She is an experienced trial and appellate lawyer who has achieved favorable results for clients through alternative dispute resolution and in state and federal courts. Jeannine is a member of the firm's Health + Benefits Litigation Team. In her free time, she volunteers at The Posse Foundation, a nonprofit organization dedicated to preparing students from diverse backgrounds for leadership. Jeannine also led the firm's sponsorship of Kozyak Minority Mentoring Foundation's Passport To Success event on February 3, 2018, which provided a setting for students, lawyers, and judges to connect with a mentor or mentee. Jeannine recently joined the Diversity Committee.

Jeannine was motivated to attend law school after participating on the Cornell University's Speech and Debate team, and began her legal career as an appellate law clerk for Judge Martha Warner of Florida's Fourth District Court of Appeal. Her next position was focused on ERISA litigation, which she found combined her interest in the factual backgrounds of life, health, and disability cases with the research and brief-writing she enjoyed while clerking. She says the biggest lesson she's learned in her career is building positive relationships with everyone she encounters on the professional ladder, from judicial assistants to opposing counsel. When not working, Jeannine enjoys spending time with her husband and daughters, traveling as much as she can, and catching up on her (non-legal) book club reading.

Noel B. Vales joined the firm in May 2017 as a resident in our New York City office. Noel recently joined the firm's Diversity Committee. His practice is focused on real estate finance and affordable housing finance. He is a member of the firm's Real Estate + Development Group, and also serves as a Board Member for Filipino American Lawyers Association of New York.

Noel immigrated with his family to the United States from the Philippines when he was only two years old. He grew up in California and moved to New York City after college to begin his legal career. He says his professional motto is "treat people with respect," as he believes rudeness is both unnecessary and unproductive. His role models are too numerous to name, including lawyers, community leaders, philanthropists and entrepreneurs, but he notes that many were trailblazers in their discipline and all exemplified excellence in their field. Noel describes himself as a "foodie," who shares a passion with his wife for visiting restaurants, from hole-in-the-wall types all the way up to 3-Star Michelin fine dining in New York City. Just as in life, there's never a shortage of new places to explore.
