

OCTOBER 2012

Introducing our newest blog, "Property Insurance Coverage Insights"

Robinson & Cole's Insurance and Reinsurance Practice Group is proud to announce the launch of our newest blog, Property Insurance Coverage Insights, in which we report on developments in the law of property insurance. Our posts discuss cases from around the nation on a wide variety of topics of interest to claims professionals and in-house counsel, including, for example, measurement of the period of restoration in the business interruption context, coverage for code upgrades, appraisal, and frequently litigated provisions such as the earth movement and pollution exclusions, and late notice. For instance, our recent posting on Millennium Inorganic Chemicals Ltd. v. National Union Fire Ins. Co., 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 140257 (D.Md., Sept. 28, 2012), discusses a new federal decision that tests the limits of contingent business (a/k/a dependent properties) interruption coverage.

As an added resource, Property Insurance Coverage Insights features overviews of many of the key topics discussed in our posts. These include fortuity, ensuing loss, and anti-concurrent causation. In addition, our new blog addresses developments in the law of bad faith in the context of property insurance claims. Finally, the blog provides links to other publications and associations that keep up with developments in the field of property insurance.

We would like to share our blog content with you on a regular basis. To receive e-mail notifications whenever we post new content, or to add our blog to your RSS feed, you can sign up on the right-hand side of the home page, under the Stay Connected tab.

We welcome your comments and hope that you find Property Insurance Coverage Insights helpful in tracking new developments in property insurance and bad faith law.
