Robinson+Cole Lawyer Appointed Secretary of New England Women in Energy & the Environment

HARTFORD, CT (January 8, 2018) – New England Women in Energy & the Environment (NEWIEE), a non-profit organization that aims to harness the passion, intelligence, and leadership experience of women to promote and encourage public interest in the energy and environmental sectors, has appointed Robinson+Cole lawyer Joey Lee Miranda to serve as Secretary of its Board of Directors. As a member of Robinson+Cole's Environmental, Energy + Telecommunications Group, Ms. Miranda focuses her practice on energy, telecommunications, and water matters, including litigation, transactional and regulatory representation, and counseling.

Ms. Miranda regularly participates in proceedings before state regulatory agencies, including the Connecticut Public Utilities Regulatory Authority, the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities, the New Hampshire Public Utilities Commission, the New York Public Service Commission, and the Connecticut Siting Council, on utility, telecommunications, and energy-related matters. She also handles administrative appeals of agency decisions to state courts. An important aspect of Ms. Miranda's practice also involves counseling clients on regulatory compliance matters. Her representative experience reflects a range of legal matters in all areas of the energy industry. Ms. Miranda has been a member of NEWIEE since its inception and has previously served in the role of Assistant Treasurer.

Founded in Boston in 2008, the goal of NEWIEE is to foster a dynamic and enthusiastic environment for those who care about energy and environmental issues in order to encourage the development of creative solutions to energy and environmental issues. Comprised of members across the public and private sectors, as well as various age groups, NEWIEE is also a stimulating forum for networking, sharing of expertise and information, and mentoring.
