Robinson & Cole Partner Edits Book on Electricity Law and Policy

HARTFORD, CT (August 10, 2009) – Robinson & Cole Environmental and Utilities partner Joey Lee Miranda recently edited a book entitled “Capturing the Power of Electric Restructuring” for the American Bar Association. The six-chapter book examines some of the most important legal and policy issues associated with electricity law, including wholesale and retail competition. Robinson & Cole partner Kenneth Baldwin authored a chapter for the book entitled, "Energy Facility Siting" and associate Matthew Dolan was a contributor as well. The book also includes a foreword prepared by former Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) Chairman Joseph Kelliher.

Ms. Miranda's practice focuses on environmental, toxic tort, and utilities matters, including litigation, transactional and regulatory representation, and counseling. She is currently secretary of New England Women in Energy and the Environment and on the Board of Directors of the Connecticut Power and Energy Society. In addition, she is a member of the Renewable Energy & Demand-Side Management Committee of the Energy Bar Association and past chair of both the Public Utilities Section and the Environmental Law Section of the Connecticut Bar Association. Ms. Miranda is a vice chair of the Environment, Energy and Resources Section, Carbon and Energy Trading and Finance Committee, of the American Bar Association.

Founded in 1845, Robinson & Cole has 240 attorneys and 250 professional staff in nine offices to serve regional, national, and global business clients in multiple practice areas, as well as individual clients, governmental, and nonprofit entities. Further information is available at rc.com.
