Ohio City Considering Anti-Drone Voyeurism Law

Recently, the Hamilton City Council in Ohio proposed a new local ordinance that would specifically prohibit the use of drones to commit voyeurism in response to complaints from a resident that someone in his neighborhood was harassing individuals with a drone by recording images. The complainant explained to the Council that a man was operating a drone and peering into windows in his neighborhood, flying over children playing in their yards and even chasing a woman down a street. The resident took video footage of the drone operations and reported the operator's actions to the police, but no specific law or regulation applied to this operator's activity. Read more
